See under "Details of Work; Fifteenth and Sixteenth Weeks"; specifically, "Colorado" (pp. 77-78), which includes (p. 77): "Drainage. Three rivers, the Arkansas, Rio Grande and Colorado, rise in the mountains of Colorado, but none are navigable in that state. They flow through cañons, or deep walled beds, from 2,000 to 5,000 feet deep. The largest of these cañons is the Grand Cañon of the Colorado. In the rainy season the water constantly washes away rocky parts of banks and carried by the water, the sharp pieces constantly make the channel deeper. There are numerous hot springs in Colorado." Special Geography of Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, New Mexico, Arizona, California, Nevada, Oregon, Washington, and Alaska." See therein: "Utah" (pp. 17-19 and map), specifically the section, "Eastern Utah", which notes: "All the streams of the Colorado system have worn deep valleys or cañons in the soft limestone in many parts of their courses. The cañons of the Colorado River proper constitute the most magnificent natural feature of their kind in the world. The mysteries of these cañons were first penetrated by Professor J. W. Powell of the United States Geological Survey, in 1869. He entered Green River with his adventurous party at a point in Wyoming Territory near the Utah line, and, after nearly three months of exploration, came out at the foot of the Grand Cañon of the Colorado, in Western Arizona." See also "Arizona" (pp. 24-25, and map), specifically the section, "Drainage", which notes: "[The Colorado River's] waters assume a reddish color from the falling of the rains upon a soil of red clay: hence the name Colorado or Colored River. [¶] The Colorado has worn through the soft strata of sandstone a narrow cañon to the depth of from 2,000 to 5,000 feet. This dark and gloomy river gorge, 400 miles long, with its stupendous walls, is noted for its grand and desolate scenery." Also note the illustration on p. 24, "In the Grand Cañon", which seems improbable.]

NOTE FOR PART 6, SECTION 2

THIS section lists young-audience stories and other purely fictional works, including works written as "historical fiction" and matter that follows a fictional narrator or human character even though the content or situations of the work are factual. Some citations append notes indicating "Fiction" to confirm that the work, the title or description of which may sound as though it is non-fiction, is in fact of a fictional nature.

[Written as if non-fiction, this is the telling of a passage through Grand Canyon on the Colorado River made by "George Robinson" in 1867; seemingly fictionalized based on the James White affair. Robinson, said to have been with Ellbrace before his adventure, is noted to have conveyed this record when Ellbrace reencountered the presumably lost Robinson just prior to the 1869 Powell expedition. Ellbrace concludes (p. 335): "Thus Robinson ended a story, which, as he said himself, seemed incredible. But it can, I believe, be substantially verified by the records of Fort Mohave during the summer of 1867." Includes contrived illustrations.]

[37] Some of Zane Grey's titles are novelized texts of actual events, written for a young-reader audience, such as Roping Lions in the Grand Canyon. These titles are listed here, although Grey anthologies cited in Part 2 (GENERAL PUBLICATIONS) of the bibliography may also include these works. Some works of fiction, while not necessarily limited to young readers, have been republished by young-reader publishers, but all of these titles are retained together within Part 7 (FICTION).

[This article reports on the development of elementary-school library activities. In one activity, students are presented with Power Point material about amazing places on earth. They were encourage to identify a place in which to turn the ideal setting into a fabricated story. One story, by five boys (not named) was "Invasion" (p. 56), which involves "Area 51" of the American Southwest and an invasion from Mars. Briefly described, it concludes, "Compunerea lor are şi nuanţe explicative legate de felul în care s-a format Marele Canion în urma unei puternice explozii care a distrus armata marţiană." (Their composition also has explanatory nuances related to the way the Grand Canyon was formed following a powerful explosion that destroyed the Martian army.)] [In Romanian.]

Marryat (Capt.) [Marryat, Frederick][38]

1843 6.1536 Narrative of the travels and adventures of Monsieur Violet, in California, Sonora, and western Texas. Written by Capt. Marryat, C.B. London: Longman, Brown, Green, and Longmans, 3 volumes, 313, 318, 299 pp., map frontispiece in Volume I. [Although the story line takes place principally in the country of the "Shoshones", north from the region of interest to this bibliography, there are occasional references to adventure in the region of the "Rio Colorado of the West" and of the "cruel race" of the "Club Indians", or "Piuses". Passages that are likely pertinent to this bibliography, with reference to the lower Colorado River region and headwaters, appear in Volume I, pp. 40 note, 171-172, 218, 224, 272; Volume II, pp. 23-24, 126 ("the big stony river (the Colorado of the West)"), 129; Volume III, p. 257. The map in Volume I is, as like the story, fictional, depicting the land of the "Shonshones"; in the southern portion of the map, near latitude 40° N, the "River Buenaventura" passes by "Mount Pleasant" beside which converge from the southwest and southeast, respectively, "The Trail to Upper California" and "The trail to the Rio Colorado del mar". Wheat (1958, Volume II, p. 182) takes note of the "flight of fancy" in the map, calling it "a silly little map" and (p. 259) "[o]bviously fiction", perhaps not realizing that Marryat was a well-known

[38] Regarding the novelist Frederick Marryat, who had resigned from the Royal Navy following the successful publication of his first novel, see notes in Mary Lee Spence, "British Impressions of Texas and the Texans", Southwestern Historical Quarterly, Vol. 70, No. 2 (October 1966), pp. 163-183; specifically about the adventures of Monsieur Violet cited here, pp. 179-182. See also: Alan Buster, Captain Marryat : sea-officer, novelist, country squire : a bio-bibliographical essay to accompany an exhibition of the life and works of Captain Frederick Marryat, R.N., 1792-1848 (University of California Library, Los Angeles, 1980), 48 pp.; and Oliver Warner, Captain Marryat : a rediscovery (Constable and Co. Ltd., London, 1953), p. 175. Spence, Buster, and Warner confirm as well that this title was written for the young-reader audience. Buster (p. 37) notes that in the Monsieur Violet story "[s]ubstantial pieces were taken from Bancroft's History of the United States, Josiah Gregg's Commerce of the Prairies and especially G. W. Kendall's Narrative of the Texan Santa Fé Expedition. There seems to be even a bit from Two Years Before the Mast."

Pocock, Roger

1911 6.1637 The path of the prospector. In: The Work of Today’s Scouts [SERIES]. Boys’ Life, 1(2) (March 15): 30-32. [Series by Pocock looks at “adventure and danger” among “pioneer types”, as inspiration for the “Scouts of Today—the men who go in front”. This first installment includes an old prospector’s yarn, recounting adventures on the San Juan River in “’83, or maybe ’84”, about a lost gold mine. Includes (in the voice of the prospector): “Years ago there used to be an Indian trail which crossed the Grand Canyon somewhere between the Little Colorado and Lee’s Ferry.” Mexicans driving stolen cattle across the canyon discovered a cave in which hung “solid gold stalactites—which, of course, is all rot.” The stock owners destroyed the trail, and “‘. . . the Mexicans never found their gold mine, and,’ he sighed, ‘I’ve put in four years now.’ ”]

1913 6.1638 With Carson and Frémont : being the adventures, in the years 1842-’43-’44, on the trail over mountains and through deserts from the east of the Rockies to the west of the Sierras, of scout Christopher Carson and Lieutenant John Charles Frémont, leading their brade company including the boy Oliver. (With illustrations by Charles H. Stephens and portraits.) Philadelphia and London: J. B. Lippincott Co., 302 pp. [Historical fiction through the eyes of “Oliver”. See Chapter 12, “The Emigrant Trail”, which includes the reminiscence of Kit Carson while in the Green River country (p. 157): “‘. . . I’ve been on the lower end o’ this hyar Green—or what mout be this hyar Green, whar it’s called the Colorado.’ [¶] ‘What’s below, Kit?’ queried the lieutenant . . . . [¶] ‘Wall,’ drawled Kit, ‘when I went out to Californy in Twnety-nine, with Captain Young, we struck the Colorado at a place whar the river’d sunk down into a canyon full a mile deep an’ three mile acrost. We didn’t get down into it, but I’m ready to believe that ’most anything could be found at the bottom. They call it the Grand Canyon, now. Injuns say thar’s a heap more o’ the same kind, up above, for three hundred mile.’” (ENTIRE NOTE) The basic information of having “struck the Colorado” is from the Carson reminiscences “as dictated to Col. and Mrs. D. C. Peters about 1856-57” (Carson, 1926, ITEM NO. 2.1895), for which see further notes. Sabin similarly suggested, in a historical review for general readers, that Kit Carson had seen the Grand Canyon (see Sabin, 1914, ITEM NO. 2.13308).] [See also remarks with Camp (1922, ITEM NO. 2.28416).]

PART 7. FICTION

GRAND CANYON AND LOWER COLORADO RIVER REGIONS

OVERVIEW. This part lists only works of fiction, including folklore and the scripts for plays and other such productions. Some titles may infer the plot is in Grand Canyon, but which really employ the name for its recognizable literary effect. Particular-interest subjects that may be considered by many to be works of fiction—such as those relating to unidentified flying objects (UFOs), ancient Egyptian relics in Grand Canyon, and Creationist topics—are considered to belong either to "General" subjects or to the specific subject to which its subject applies (e.g., geology) and will be found in those other parts of this bibliography. This part includes works written as "historical fiction" and matter that follows a fictional narrator or human character even though the content of the work is factual; this includes scripts for plays and screenplays. Critical analyses of fictional works will be found in Part 2 (GENERAL PUBLICATIONS) of this bibliography.

RELATED MATERIAL

PART 3. THE NEW YORK TIMES for additional items that relate to this part of the bibliography (which are not repeated in this part)
PART 6, SECTION 2. YOUTH—FICTION for young-reader ("juvenile") fiction

Part 7 includes citations of items that contain potentially offensive material, with sexual or other matter that some users, for religious, moral, or personal reasons, may not wish to encounter. The pertinent citations are grouped in the Supplement at the end of Part 7. It is additionally important to segregate these citations as this is an internationally focused bibliography with an international audience, whose particular perspectives may not be known to this compiler. The cited items themselves may contain explicit material but a few of them do not themselves contain explicit content; yet these, too, are segregated because the serials in which they appear do contain such matter. (Off-color language is not considered reason for segregation.)

("From an interview by our staff correspondent".) [In the "interview", Blivvens is quoted (p. 49), "But undoubtedly the most serious thing before the American public is the gradual erasure of the Grand Canyon. I have laid, or lain, awake many hours thinking of that and trying to find a way to stop it. Dr. Davis of Harvard says that it will eventually be as flat as yesterday's newspaper. Frankly I don't like it." Shortly later, he continues, "But tell me, have you ever seen the Grand Canyon?" The correspondent replies, "No." "Neither have I, and that's why I worry about it. If I had had a look at it, it could flatten out any time it pleased."]

[39] Holtzin's self-published works, without imprint, have over time been selectively re-released under new titles and dates but with little or no revision or new format other than cover and title-page. Once this approach was discovered, only those volumes that can be verifiably cited by physical examination without financial outlay will be listed in this bibliography.

[41] Some of Zane Grey's titles are novelized texts of actual events, written for a young-reader audience. These titles will be found listed in Part 6, Section 2 of this bibliography, although Grey anthologies cited in Part 2 (GENERAL PUBLICATIONS) of the bibliography may include these works. Some works of fiction, while not necessarily limited to young readers, have been republished by young-reader publishers, but all of these titles are retained in the present part (Part 7) of the bibliography.

[43] Salgari's La Sovrana del Campo d'Oro is often cataloged as a young-reader title, which in essence it is. Although the story includes violent scenes, different editions and translations include illustrations by various artists, some of which one would not consider appropriate for young readers; thus for consistency all are cited with the regular items of fiction in this bibliography. Only one edition is cited herein with the material for young readers (see Salgari, 1982, ITEM NO. 6.1505), a Spanish translation that was especially adapted for young readers.)

[First ed.] [Later printings under this imprint, and printings under other imprints, with frequently redesigned cover art and text illustrations.] [Story takes place in the late 1800s in the Grand Canyon vicinity. "La Sovrana del Campo d'Oro" is the nickname of the lead character, Miss Annie Clayfert. Frequent references to Grand Canyon throughout, and occasionally Marble Canyon, but take note particularly of Chapter 13, "Verso il Gran Cañon"; Chapter 15, "La corriera del «Gran Cañon»"; Chapter 20, "Il «Gran Cañon» del Colorado"; Chapter 23, "Nel fondo del «Gran Cañon»"; and see also illustration, "Per dieci minuti fiancheggiarono la roccia, avanzando adagio, adagio .." [ellipsis thus], that illustrates a scene in Grand Canyon from Chapter 20, with staffage that greatly reduces the scale of the view.] [In Italian.]

[44] As is typical of great works of literature, John Steinbeck's Pulitzer prize-winning The Grapes of Wrath has been reprinted, translated, and incorporated into anthologies for decades. For this and other work, Steinbeck was awarded the Nobel Prize in Literature in 1962. The citations here are representative of the breadth of publications that have been produced, though none of the anthologies are cited. Chapter 18 of The Grapes of Wrath pertains to this bibliography. There the family of Dustbowl refugees en route to California passes through northern Arizona by way of Oatman and along the Colorado River in the Topock-Needles area.

SUPPLEMENT TO PART 7

Potentially Offensive Material Cited Separately

Part 7 includes citations of items that contain potentially offensive material, with sexual or other matter that some users, for religious, moral, or personal reasons, may not wish to encounter. The pertinent citations are grouped in this Supplement. It is additionally important to segregate these citations as this is an internationally focused bibliography with an international audience, whose particular perspectives may not be known to this compiler. The cited items themselves may contain explicit material but a few of them do not; yet these, too, are segregated because the serials in which they appear do contain such matter. (Off-color language is not considered reason for segregation.)

[Begins (p. 28): "Once in the Jurassic, about 150 million years ago, / the Great Sun Buddha in this corner of the Infinite / Void gave a great Discourse to all the assembled elements / and energies: to the standing beings, the walking beings, the flying beings, and the sitting beings—even grasses, / to the number of thirteen billion, each one born from a seed, were assembled there: a Discourse concerning / Enlightenment on the planet Earth. [¶] 'In some future time, there will be a continent called / America. It will have great centers of power called / such as Pyramid Lake, Walden Pond, Mt. Rainier, Big Sur, / Everglades, and so forth; and powerful nerves and channels / such as Columbia River, Mississippi River, and Grand Canyon. / The human race in that era will get into troubles all over its head, and practically wreck everything in spite of its own strong intelligent Buddha-nature. [¶] 'The twisting strata of the great mountains and the pulsings / of great volcanoes are my love burning deep in the earth. / My obstinate compassion is schist and basalt and / granite, to be mountains, to bring down the rain. In that / future American Era I shall enter a new form: to cure / the world of loveless knowledge that seeks with blind hunger; / and mindless rage eating food that will not fill it.' [¶]And he showed himself in his true form of / SMOKEY THE BEAR."]

1940	8.826	The stricken pioneer. The Rotarian, 56(5) (June): 6. [This poem is noted by Garland (1930, ITEM NO. 2.28107) in his collection of stories about famous people, Roadside Meetings, to have been written after having met the infirm John Wesley Powell and which commemorates Powell and Garland's similarly infirm Uncle William. The 1930 printing comprises three stanzas that do not specifically mention these men. The Rotarian printing comprises six stanzas—three additional stanzas preceding those that were printed in 1930, and with edits to the final three stanzas as compared to the 1930 printing. The newer (first three) stanzas likewise do not mention the men by name, but the third stanza in this now-longer version does recall "The mightiest canyon of the earth / he conquered [. . .] [he now] taking no part / In all the explorations of the West." The Rotarian version does not include any part of the prose introductory notes that appeared in the 1930 printing.]

[45] Nicholas Morrow Williams (see Jao, ITEM NOS. 8.870, 8.872) explained in his "Prefatory Note" to The Residue of Dreams (p. xiii) that he uses the Pinyin system of Chinese transliteration, except for Jao's name: "Jao achieved an international reputation in the 1960s, when the Wade-Giles system was still widely used, so his English name follows the Wade-Giles romanization: Jao Tsung-i instead of Pinyin Rao Zongyi." Note as well that the English name of Hong Kong Baptist University's Academy of Sinology (see Jao, ITEM NO. 8.870) honors "Jao Tsung-i", as do numerous other institutions named for him.

TRAVEL AND TRAIL GUIDES

Informational guides to routing, attractions and accommodations of hiking, camping, and land-, water- and air-travel in the Grand Canyon region and the vicinity of the lower Colorado River (excluding Colorado River guides and geological field guides)

PART 9. TRAVEL AND TRAIL GUIDES FOR THE GRAND CANYON AND LOWER COLORADO RIVER REGIONS

OVERVIEW. This part includes only those publications that provide route-finding information, seasonal or other data on accommodations, and time-limited information such as fees; specifically for hiking, camping, auto, air or river travel, lodging, restaurants, commercial recreational and educational opportunities, and scenic attractions. Resources include those for equestrian and other stock use, pet-related travel, and similar activities. Some travel advisories are also included here.

RELATED MATERIAL

PART 2 GENERAL PUBLICATIONS for travel memoirs and "travel" material that is substantially more than information about accommodations, facilities, activities, etc.

PART 3 THE NEW YORK TIMES for additional items that relate to this part of the bibliography

PART 5 for segregated listings that contains publications for people with disabilities

PART 6 YOUTH for pertinent items that relate to this part of the bibliography

PART 10 COLORADO RIVER GUIDES for travel guides to the Colorado River

PART 11, SECTION 2 LOWER COLORADO RIVER—GEOLOGY for geological guides in the lower Colorado River region

PART 23 GEOLOGICAL FIELD GUIDES for specialized geological guides to the Grand Canyon region and Colorado River through Grand Canyon

PART 26 AUDIO-VISUAL WORKS for travel guides on film or digital media

PART 27 AUDIO WORKS for travel guides on audio media (for example, for use in automobiles)

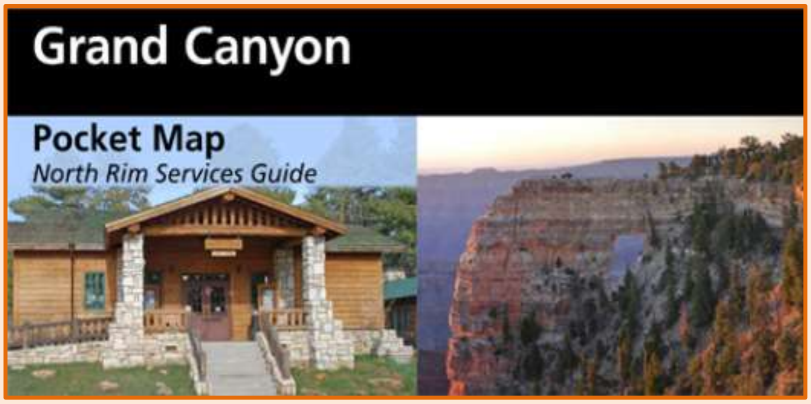
Part 9 includes citations of items that contain potentially offensive material, with sexual or other matter that some users, for religious, moral, or personal reasons, may not wish to encounter. The pertinent citations are grouped in the Supplement at the end of Part 9. It is additionally important to segregate these citations as this is an internationally focused bibliography with an international audience, whose particular perspectives may not be known to this compiler. The cited items themselves may contain explicit material but a few of them do not; yet these, too, are segregated because the serials in which they appear do contain such matter. (Off-color language is not considered reason for segregation.)

NOTES FOR PART 9

MATERIAL that appears in periodically published regional tourists' guides is selected. Often the texts are repeated from one season, and from one year, to the next. Thus, for some such publications a representative sampling is included in the bibliography. If an item stands out from others that are usually repeated, or if their eye-catching titles differ greatly between installments, they will be cited as examples of editorial style and the editors' intention to refocus the article's interest for the visitor.

More specifically, from the Grand Canyon Tusayan Guide (and variant titles) and the affiliated Williams guide that also includes Grand Canyon and Tusayan, both published by the Williams-Grand Canyon News, all general items are included in Part 2 (GENERAL PUBLICATIONS) rather than mixing them between Parts 2 and 9. This was done because the contexts and content of individual items are so closely interrelated that they could be listed in either part, or both, probably to even greater distraction to those who are browsing this bibliography. I feel that it is more beneficial to keep these frequently addressed, selected, items together.

U.S. National Park Service publications are proliferate. After the Second World War, National Park Service guides to park units became essentially just guides to services and activities, foregoing the pre-war style of including essays and other culturally informative texts in addition to visitors' information and rules and regulations. These pre-war publications are cited in Part 2 (GENERAL PUBLICATIONS) of this bibliography—see there variously under U.S. Department of the Interior or U.S. National Park Service. However, pre-war guides specifically for hiking and similar activities are listed here in Part 9. Beginning in 1977 park-specific productions include the standardized "Unigrid" publications, which feature a black-background banner on the front of each, with at least the Park Service unit noted as text within the banner. All of the post-war guides are cited here in Part 9. Unigrid products are easily identified by the prominent banner on the front of each production; for example, these single-sheet folded brochures:



Grand Canyon
Pocket Map
North Rim Services Guide

Pipe Spring

See also Part 31 (NEWSPAPERS) of the bibliography for citations of pertinent park-unit newspapers, which served similar functions to the activities guides (for example, Grand Canyon National Park Guide and related titles, ITEM NO. 31.36).

(Printed by The Hicks-Judd Co., San Francisco.) [On p. 9, the name of the stage company appears as "Grand Canyon Stage Company".] [1899-1900.] [Sometimes cited as by William Wallace Bass, proprietor of the stage line. However, the writer was George Wharton James, inasmuch as Bass wrote impatiently to James in 1894, having waited five years, "For God's sake , how many years does it take you to get out a little $1.00 book?" (Quoted by Roger Keith Larson, Controversial James : an essay on the life and work of George Wharton James (Book Club of California, 1991), p. 89.] • [Regarding the date of publication, which has been variously queried as 1896-1900: On the back cover is an advertisement for books, photographs, and lantern slides of the Grand Canyon, available from W. W. Bass, Ash Fork, or from Grand Canyon Photo Co., Pasadena, California; also notice of G[eorge]. Wharton James' The Grand Canyon of the Colorado River, said there to be "now in the press", which was published in 1900. The Special Collections and Archives (SCA), Cline Library, Northern Arizona University, Flagstaff, hold the original of a photo of a Havasupai mother with child next to a wickiup (photo 91.15.18), which is another view of the one published in the Grand Canyon Stage Line booklet (p. 16); the date for it is given by SCA as 1899. Thus, the date of this booklet is most likely 1899 or early 1900.]

[Includes: "Of the many readers of this department, few of those who think of visiting the Grand Canyon of the Colorado in Arizona ever contemplate a hunting trip in the same connection. Yet a fine trip may be had simply by outfitting at El Tovar Hotel at Grand Canyon and heading for the north rim of the canyon in Utah [sic]. A very few hunting parties come into that country from the north, a long and hard trip, and comparatively few go in from Grand Canyon, but there is quite good deer and mountain lion hunting. Rates for the trip run from $10 a day for one sportsman and $3 a day for each additional one, to $14 and $8. These rates cover necessary horses and one guide and complete equipment; provisions are extra.” (ENTIRE NOTE)]

2022 9.1784 North Kaibab Trail. Like all hikes into the Grand Canyon, the descent to Roaring Springs is pretty easy, but coming out ... well, the North Kaibab will take your breath away, but that's what a great hike is supposed to do. In: Hike of the Month [SECTION]. Arizona Highways, 98(8) (August): 54-55. [Ellipsis is part of title.]

Stieve, Robert, AND Brownold, Tom

2012 9.941 North Kaibab Trail. Although this hike can get a little crowded in July, do it anyway. The trek to Roaring Springs is about as good as it gets. Arizona Highways, 88(7) (July): 54-55.

2020 9.1710 South Kaibab Trail. Although many hikers go the distance, the South Kaibab can be abbreviated into a doable day hike. It's still a workout, but the views from within the Grand Canyon are well worth it. Arizona Highways, 96(5) (May): 54-55.

Stieve, Robert, AND Dykinga, Jack

2012 9.940 North Rim back roads; there's no shortage of scenery on the road to the North Rim, but the views are even better along the back roads that lead to Saddle Mountain Wilderness. Arizona Highways, 88(7) (July): 52-53.

2015 9.1189 North Rim Parkway. There's a reason this drive has been designated a National Scenic Byway. Actually, there are many, including the grassy meadows, the quaking aspens and the Kaibab squirrels. In: Scenic Drive [SECTION]. Arizona Highways, 91(6) (June): 52-53.

U.S. National Park Service

NOTE for all U.S. National Park Service citations: After the Second World War, National Park Service guides to park units became essentially just guides to services and activities, foregoing the pre-war style of including essays and other culturally informative texts in addition to visitors' information and rules and regulations. The pre-war publications are cited in Part 2 (GENERAL PUBLICATIONS) of this bibliography—see there variously under U.S. Department of the Interior or U.S. National Park Service. Pre-war guides specifically for hiking, driving and similar activities are listed here in Part 9. Beginning in 1977 park-specific productions include the standardized "Unigrid" publications, which feature a black-background banner on the front of each, with at least the Park Service unit noted as text within the banner (see examples in the Notes to Part 9). Special accessibility guides for physically impaired users are also listed in Part 5 of this bibliography. See also Part 6/Section 1 for Park Service items that were produced for younger readers and users. See also Part 31 (NEWSPAPERS) of the bibliography for citations of pertinent park-unit newspapers, which served similar functions to the activities guides (for example, Grand Canyon National Park Guide and related titles, ITEM NO. 31.36).

SUPPLEMENT TO PART 9

Potentially Offensive Material Cited Separately

Part 9 includes citations of items that contain potentially offensive material, with sexual or other matter that some users, for religious, moral, or personal reasons, may not wish to encounter. The pertinent citations are grouped in this Supplement. It is additionally important to segregate these citations as this is an internationally focused bibliography with an international audience, whose particular perspectives may not be known to this compiler. The cited items themselves may contain explicit material but a few of them do not; yet these, too, are segregated because the serials in which they appear do contain such matter. (Off-color language is not considered reason for segregation.)

[47] These citations of river guides produced by different members of the Belknap family are based substantially on information provided by Richard D. Quartaroli, whose collection of river maps and his knowledge of them is incomparable [for an early review see the symposium presentation by Quartaroli, "Evolution of the printed Colorado River guide in Grand Canyon, Arizona", in Michael F. Anderson (compiler, ed.), A gathering of Grand Canyon historians; ideas, arguments, and first-person accounts; proceedings of the inaugural Grand Canyon History Symposium, January 2002 (Grand Canyon Association, Monograph 13, 2005), pp. 155-162]. The Belknaps have produced guides in the form of strip maps for various western rivers, appearing in many editions and printings, and in waterproof and non-waterproof states. Those that include lower Glen Canyon (that reach now between Glen Canyon Dam and Lees Ferry), Marble Canyon, and Grand Canyon are listed here. Some printings of specific editions indicate they are revisions, while in other printings minor changes may be noted by those familiar with these maps, though those volumes do not state that they are revisions. Pertinent points, when known, are included in citations. It has not been possible to list every unique publication because not every known edition and printing have been seen. Further, there may be the occasional discovery of what seem to be variants; for example, Spamer's copy of Belknap's (1969, ITEM NO. 10.5) 4th printing (1973) of the non-waterproof state has a back cover like that of the 1st printing, which might indicate the use of wraps overstocked from earlier printings. In the case of the Canyonlands maps (Belknap and Belknap, 1974; Belknap et al., 1991, 2006, 2010, which include the Colorado River in lower Glen Canyon), fewer printings within eds. have been seen by Quartaroli or Spamer. The Glen Canyon reach was also first added to the Grand Canyon maps in Belknap and Evans' 2017 ed., though it also continues to appear in the Canyonlands guide.]

2019 10.113 Colorado River mile system, Grand Canyon, Arizona. U.S. Geological Survey, Data Release, https://doi.org/10.5066/P9IRL3GV. [ONLINE RESOURCE. USGS ScienceBase link: https://www.sciencebase.gov/catalog/item/5b2185ace4b092d96528747b.] [Glen Canyon Dam to Pearce Ferry. "These data represent the centerline and measured increments at hundredths, tenths and whole miles, along the centerline of the Colorado River beginning at Glen Canyon Dam near Page, Arizona and terminating near the inflows of Lake Mead in the Grand Canyon region of Arizona, USA. The centerline was digitized using Color Infra-Red (CIR) orthophotography collected in March 2000 as source information and a LiDAR-derived river shoreline representing 8,000 cubic feet per second (CFS) as the defined extent of the river. Every effort was made to follow the main flow of the river while keeping the line approximately equidistant from both shorelines. The centerline feature class has been created to more accurately map locations along the Colorado River downstream of the Glen Canyon Dam. River miles and river kilometers were developed from measurements along this line. The incremental point feature classes were derived from the centerline of the Colorado River datasets. Specifically, the points were generated from nodes extracted from the centerline endpoints of the tenth mile line feature class. The Grand Canyon Monitoring and Research Center (GCMRC) river mileage was cross-checked with commercially available river guides and always fell within one mile of the guides, usually corresponding within a half mile. Additionally, these data were subjected to internal review by GCMRC scientists and commercial boatmen with decades of river travel experience on the Colorado River. River Mile 0 was measured from the USGS concrete gage and cableway at Lees Ferry, Arizona—as per the Colorado River Compact of 1922—with negative river mile numbers used in Glen Canyon and positive river mile numbers downstream in Marble and Grand Canyons. These data were updated in March 2015 using newer ortho-rectified imagery collected in May of 2009 and 2013, both at approximately 8,000 CFS. Due to extended drought conditions that have persisted in the U.S. Southwest, lake levels have dropped dramatically, especially at Lake Mead. A stretch of the Colorado River corridor that was part of Lake Mead in year 2000 has returned to a flowing river once again, and with a different channel that has not previously existed. All changes to the original centerline are downstream of River Mile 260 which is just upstream of Quartermaster Canyon in western Grand Canyon. New river miles and river kilometers were developed from this updated centerline.”]

[48] Jones privately produced numerous sheet and scroll maps for use on various western rivers. All maps were produced on an as-needed basis. Those that relate specifically to the area covered by this bibliography are cited here. Information significantly contributing to these citations and this note was obtained from Richard D. Quartaroli in January/February 2020. Two price lists from Jones, dated March 20, 1982, and July, 1989, indicate products that were available at those times. The known set of maps are (quoted from the price lists and numbered here for convenience not as record; Grand Canyon products noted in bold):

1982 LIST — "Colorado River Basin": [1] "Desolation-Red C." [and] "Lodore-Split Mtn.", [2] Moab-Green R.", [3] "Westwater Canyon (Granite C. to Moab)", [4] "Cataract Canon (From Moab)", [5] "Grand Canyon", [6] Yampa River (Maybell-Echo Park), [7] "Dolores River (Dolores to Colo. "Salmon R. Basin" [19] "Middle Fk. of Salmon 1990", [20] "Salmon: M. Fk.-Vinegar Cr.". "Oregon Rivers": [21] "Rogue River to the Ocean", [22] "McKenzie River".

1924 Plan and profile of Colorado River from Lees Ferry, Ariz., to Black Canyon, Ariz.-Nev., and Virgin River, Nev. (see Birdseye, 1924, ITEM NO. 24.46); the separate Birdseye plans and profiles are reproduced in continuous parallel views. Profusely annotated by Jones with ratings of rapids, notes of river flows during historic trips, miscellaneous historical notes and notes from trips taken by Jones, occasional inset sketch maps of rapids with boat run lines at the times when mapped, and geological notes. Also noted for this citation is a table of data for a kayak run of the river, Lees Ferry to Pearce Ferry, September 1962 (table in two separate sections on scroll). Annotations emended occasionally, sometimes with keyed dates affixed.] [Other specifically interesting annotations, added after 1962, include table, "All time record low water run: 1000 cfs very fine rock exposed", October 1963; table appears in two separate sections on scroll. Scroll concludes with graphical data for river flows according to weeks of the year.] [Widths of scrolls can vary between ca. 7-10 inches, depending upon the amount of free space on the medium used. Variants include coverage Lees Ferry to Diamond Creek (a 1995 reproduction, a signed copy acquired by Spamer in 1995, measures 6⅜ inches × 29 feet, 4 inches). Other measurements noted from library catalog records are: Lees Ferry to Lake Mead, Temple Bar (7 inches × 43 feet, 4½ inches); and Lees Ferry to Lake Mead, Overton Arm (8 inches × 51 feet, 5 inches).] • [Other points (taken from the 1995 variant noted above) — Scroll head notes: "Western Whitewater Snake, Salmon, Colorado, Green, Madison, Yellowstone, Missouri; ride the wilderness whitewaters in reverence before God—with a prayer his strength will be in you—Leslie Allen Jones, 3451 N. River Rd., Midway, Utah, 84049". "Whitewater exploration and mapping—Colorado Basin". Start of scroll headed "To: (226 mi.) Diamond Cr." The 1995 production seems to have been prepared in order to add notations of photo numbers from the Grand Canyon "Legends" river trip of September 1994 (also known as the "Old Timers Trip"). An asterisk notes on the margin, "The Grand Canyon Continuous Photo Album Set is available at the Historical Libraries: Cline Library, Flagstaff, Az., BYU [Brigham Young University], Utah, Univ. of Utah, and from Leslie A. Jones".] • [Richard Quartaroli's partial record (January/February 2020) of Jones scrolls notes for Grand Canyon the following variants (numbered here for convenience and not for record, parenthetical dates indicate dates interpreted from annotations): [1] Lees Ferry to Virgin River, Colorado River miles 0-330, 1962 (1963?), 11¼-inch paper; [2] Lees Ferry to Virgin River, miles 0-330, 1962 (1964), 7¾-inch paper; [3] Lees Ferry to Lake Mead, miles 0-315, 1962 (1963), 7-inch Mylar; [4] Lees Ferry to Lake Mead, miles 0-315, 1962 (1965), 7½-inch Mylar; [5] Lees Ferry to Diamond Creek, 0-226, 1962 (1995), 6½-inch Mylar; [6] Lees Ferry to Diamond Creek, 1962 (1995), 8½-inch Mylar. Quartaroli also reports (July 2020) [7] a poorly reproduced 7-inch Mylar scroll with many splices that had been acquired by a previous user in 2001, with signs of having been used on the river, which begins at Spring Canyon, and at the end of which is the labeling and notations, "Lower Granite Gorge: Grand C. [49] Points relating to production, editions, and printings of the RiverMaps series were provided by Duwain Whitis (February and July 2021). The date given in square brackets as a note within a citation is Whitis's record of the date of delivery from the printer, thus the date of availability. These dates with months, except those that may be specifically quoted, do not appear in the publications themselves. Whitis further remarks that changes in cover state may be due to the fact that one of the printers in use laminates both sides of the covers as opposed to just the outside.

— Approximate geographical area of the “LOWER COLORADO RIVER REGION” as defined by and covered in THE GRAND CANON. The boundary in the Gulf of California encompasses Mexico’s Reserva de la Biosfera Alto Golfo de California y Delta del Río Colorado and in Sonora embraces part of Reserva de la Biosfera del Pinacate y Gran Desierto. THE GRAND CANON defines “Lower Colorado River” as that region below Grand Canyon, which differs from the hydrological Lower Colorado River Basin that begins below the confluence of the Paria River at Lees Ferry and incorporates the sub-basins of all tributary streams, including the Little Colorado and Gila Rivers. (Refer also to the maps at the beginning of Part 12.)

Base map of Colorado River drainage basin modified from U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, Glen Canyon Dam Adaptive Management Group. The Upper and Lower Colorado River Basins delineate the apportionment of the waters of the Colorado River basin by the Colorado River Compact of 1922; divided just downstream from the confluence of the Paria River near Lees Ferry. Dams and impoundments are indicated on the map. Lighter-gray areas, not labeled, are American Indian reservations. Basin boundary is not depicted in Mexico. (For a map of the physiography and political geography of the Colorado River basin (including Mexico) see in the “Format and Coverage” section of THE GRAND CANON Volume 1/Part A.) —— Área geográfica aproximada cubierta por THE GRAND CANON, que abarca las regione del bajo Río Colorado. El límite en el golfo abarca la Reserva de la Biósfera Alto Golfo de California y Delta del Río Colorado en México, y en Sonora abarca parte de la Reserva de la Biosfera del Pinacate y Gran Desierto. Esta bibliografía define "Bajo Río Colorado" como la región debajo del Gran Cañón, que difiere de la cuenca hidrográfica del bajo Río Colorado que comienza debajo de la confluencia del Río Paria en Lees Ferry, Arizona, e incorpora las subcuencas de todos los arroyos tributarios, incluidos los ríos Little Colorado y Gila. (Consulte también el mapas al comienzo de la Parte 12.)

Mapa base de la cuenca de drenaje del Río Colorado modificado de la Oficina de Recuperación de los Estados Unidos, Grupo de Manejo Adaptivo de la Presa Glen Cañón. Las Cuencas del Superior e Inferior Río Colorado delinean el reparto de las aguas de la cuenca del Río Colorado por el Acuerdo del Río Colorado de 1922; dividido justo aguas abajo de la confluencia del Río Paria cerca de Lees Ferry. Las presas y los embalses están indicados en el mapa. Las áreas gris claro, no etiquetadas, son reservaciones de indios americanos. El límite de la cuenca no se representa en México. (Para obtener un mapa de la fisiografía y geografía política de la cuenca del río Colorado, consulte la sección "Formato y cobertura" ["Format and Coverage"] de THE GRAND CANON Volume 1/Part A.) INTRODUCTORY NOTE FOR PARTS 11 AND 12

SPECIALIZED MATERIAL ABOUT THE LOWER COLORADO RIVER REGION (BELOW GRAND CANYON)

PART 11 (Lower Colorado River—Environment, Natural History, and Special Scientific, Technical, or Cultural Issues) and PART 12 (Lower Colorado River—Water Supply, Management, and Policy are separated from the Grand Canyon focus of this bibliography to facilitate a more sensible breakdown for those users who may be interested only in the special issues of the lower Colorado River region. Generally speaking, this is the region from Lake Mead to the Colorado River delta, including the areas of the Salton Sea and the Imperial and Mexicali Valleys of California and Baja California, the uppermost Gulf of California in Mexico's Biosfera Alto Golfo de California y Delta del Río Colorado and adjacent Reserva de la Biosfera del Pinacate y Gran Desierto. For this bibliography certain engineering projects along the Colorado River from Glen Canyon Dam to the delta are included in this group so as to keep citations about this genre together.

See further breakdowns within Parts 11 and 12.

Publications of a general nature that embrace the lower Colorado River region are cited in Part 2 of the bibiography.

As for the peculiar appendage of the Salton Sea region, as also covered in this bibliography, were it not for natural breakouts of the Colorado River to the Salton Sink, the natural history of the lower Colorado River region would not be attached to this bibliography. The Salton Sink (and its historical ancient Lake Cahuilla) is as much a part of the Colorado River delta as that which sinks actually into the Gulf of California. Then, with the anthropogenic breakout of the river during 1905–1907, the whole Salton Sea region—and eventually the Imperial and Mexicali valleys—opened itself in every other respect to the coverage of this bibliography, in terms of geography, geology, and all aspects of human affairs, like engineering, agriculture, culture, and tourism. Thus while a periodic hydrogeologic event let this bibliography embrace the physical Salton Sink, an accident by hapless water managers also forced it to embrace lasting environmental effects and human activities in this region.

In order to place the Salton Sea and Colorado Desert region in contemporary perspective with events of the early 20th century, the following two pages display two maps compiled by G. Sykes, from D. T. MacDougal et al.'s (1914) "The Salton Sea: A study of the geography, the geology, the floristics, and the ecology of a desert basin" (Carnegie Institution of Washington, Publication 193; cited herein as ITEM NO. 11.495): Plate 2, "Map of the Desert of the Colorado", and Plate 15, "Map of the Salton Sink".

NOTES FOR PART 11 [50]

THIS part includes references about all disciplines of environment and natural history, restricted to the region along the lower Colorado River corridor from Lake Mead to the delta. It includes geological field guides and geologic maps for this region, and hydrologic investigations of the river-proper as limited to this reach, including studies that embrace the part of Lake Mead that has inundated the lower Grand Canyon. Studies pertaining to the Gulf of California that embrace in some measure the Colorado River delta region are cited here. Selected archaeological and ethnological investigations of the river corridor are also in this part, as well as the Lake Mead and lower Virgin River region. Natural-history and environmental studies related to the Salton Sea, and water-quality and health issues relating to the waters of the lower Colorado River, below Grand Canyon, are also included. Administrative reports and study for areas in this geographic region are in this part. Some specialized reports that pertain to environmental activities in the U.S. Army Yuma Proving Ground and U.S. Marine Corps Air Station Yuma are also found in this part. Most general references related to agriculture are excluded from this bibliography due to the far-reaching and specialized nature of such material, which place it in the realm of agricultural methods in general; only those that pertain to specific issues in the lower Colorado River region and its irrigation projects are included.

As indicated in the title for Part 11, this part embraces mostly scientifically and technically oriented material. For example, geology, biology, and some archaeology and ethnology relating to the lower Colorado River region will be found together. Creating a truly separate, comprehensive bibliography for the lower Colorado River region would further require that thousands of citations also be copied from PART 2 (General Publications), again inflating and making the bibliography more complicated. Thus Parts 11 and 12 will serve those who are interested only in the specialized focuses of these parts of the bibliography. I have separated out into its own part (Part 12) only the water-management issues, which thematically makes sense, especially in the lower Colorado River region.

[50] Also see the introductory note to the Lower Colorado River Region unit (Parts 11 & 12) of this bibliography.

Regarding Section 1, I have enlarged the geographic coverage of this bibliography to embrace the environmentally protected areas at the northern end of the Gulf of California because many species and environments are affected by historic and changing contributions of the Colorado River through its delta. With regard to the marine faunas there, the environmental changes caused by the effective cessation of Colorado River flows into the gulf, and the effects of fishing activities, intertwine to such a degree that it is imperative to cite publications that relate to these areas and subjects. Documents that are Environmental Impact Statements, and similar administrative and guidance documents, are mostly included in Part 13 (Administrative Items) because they often embrace multiple areas of administrative oversight and are not solely focused on ecological concerns as might be inferred from the title; grouping all such management documents together in this bibliography is more sensible. Exceptions are those documents that are specifically or predominantly biological or ecological in perspective, which are included in Part 19 (Biology and Ecology) or in Part 11, Section 1 (for those items that pertain to the environment of lower Colorado River region locales), or items that relate to Native American cultural issues specifically, which are in Part 17 (Native Americans of the Grand Canyon Region) or Part 11, Section 3 (lower Colorado River locales).

Regarding Section 2, I likewise enlarge the geographic coverage of the bibliography to embrace the regional geological influences expressed in the upper Gulf of California and the Colorado River delta region generally.

Citations that relate to the flooding of the Salton Sea are found in two different parts of this bibliography. Items that pertain to relate to the natural breakout of the Colorado River into the Salton Sink in 1891 and historically earlier events are listed in Section 2. Items that pertain to the anthropogenic breakout of the Colorado during 1905-1907 are listed in Part 12, Section 1 of the bibliography.

Citations that pertain to the Peach Springs Tuff, named originally for occurrences in northwestern Arizona, are for the sake of bibliographical convenience cited in Section 2. The Peach Springs Tuff type locality is near Peach Springs, Mohave County, Arizona, and thus falls more properly into Part 21 of this bibliography. However, the unit has more notably been the subject of detailed studies and correlations throughout the Arizona–Nevada–California region, the tuff source area being identified in the Silver Creek caldera of the southern Black Mountains; a majority of the published work pertains to those correlated occurrences and identification of source area, which occur mostly in the lower Colorado River region.

Documents in certain specialized areas, such as geothermal energy and related investigations, may be found in online sources devoted to these areas — for example, the International Geothermal Association's "Geothermal Confererence Paper Database" at:

http://www.geothermal-energy.org/publications_and_services/conference_paper_database.html. The U.S. Department of Energy's Office of Scientific and Technical Information likewise has a comprehensive database, SciTech Connect, which consolidates the contents of OSTI's Information Bridge and Energy Citations Database, accessible at http://www.osti.gov/scitech/. In some cases, the citations gathered from these sources provide English-language titles for papers that may be in Spanish, but which titles were apparently taken from the accompanying English abstract. This may be reflected in some citations herein.

The Appendix to Section 2A—now removed to the separate Cartobibliography—provides guides to the quadrangle systems of topographic maps in the lower Colorado River region used by the U.S. Geological Survey and Mexico's Instituto Nacional de Estadística y Geografía and likewise for geological maps of the Servicio Geológico Mexicano, and maps of other agencies.

Regarding Section 3, the lower Colorado River region hosts Indigenous peoples who have traditional and legislatively administered lands in the U.S. and Mexico. Most items in this bibliography that relate to them are listed in that section.

As a subjective decision, I have not included probably thousands of citations that would relate to very technical agricultural studies in the lower Colorado River region. These would, in fact, best be the subject of a separate, specialized bibliography, which must be constructed from the start. Occasional agricultural items will be found in this bibliography, though. These are included for more specific focuses; for example, aspects of irrigation or taxonomic, ecological, or historical references.

Arbitrarily included in Part 11 are technical reports and articles that pertain to the U.S. Army Yuma Proving Ground and the U.S. Marine Corps Air Station Yuma.

As an informational note, the U.S. National Park Service's four-letter unit identifiers include "LAME", which indicated LAke MEad National Recreation Area. This followed the convention of applying the first four letters of single-name units, or the first two letters of the first two names of multiple-name units. The identifier, for obvious reasons, was eventually changed to "LAKE". Citations reflect both of these identifiers.

NOTES FOR PART 11, SECTION 1

MEXICO'S RÍO COLORADO, now in the best of times just a pitiful remnant of the Colorado River, eventually passes into the Reserva de la Biosfera Alto Golfo de California y Delta del Río Colorado that embraces the northernmost portion of the Gulf of California, its southern boundary spanning the gulf about between San Felipe, Baja California, on the west and Puerto Peñasco, Sonora, on the east. Although it might not seem necessary to include the marine environment of the Gulf of California in this bibliography, its northern end has for millennia been influenced by the outflow of the Colorado River, flush with the mighty, silt- and sand-laden torrents from the continental interior, perhaps at times influenced by the formation of geologically temporary lakes enroute—and, today, absolutely and contemptuously impacted by the complete cessation of river flow, every last drop shunted off to farms and cities, which has had impacts on the environment of the northern gulf. The lives of Indigenous peoples and modern Mexicans alike have also been affected by environmental and legislative acts in this area; and equally these people influence the environment of the gulf, including its biological communities. This historical connection of river, sea and people prompts the inclusion of the Biosphere Reserve area, but there this bibliography ends its geographical reach southward.

Readers who may be interested in a bibliography of ecologically focused work for the entire Gulf of California should consult Richard C. Brusca's vast, and frequently updated, online resource, "A Bibliography for the Sea of Cortez (Gulf of California)", at https://www.rickbrusca.com/http___www.rickbrusca.com_index.html/Research_files/Gulf%20Bibliography.pdf [URL thus; last accessed 20 August 2024].

Sociological and economic issues relating to protected areas in the northern Gulf of California are found in Part 2 (GENERAL PUBLICATIONS), or, if they pertain to Indigenous peoples of the region, in Part 11, Section 3. Items pertaining to health concerns among lower Colorado River Indigenies will also be found in Part 11, Section 3.

Because the waters of Lake Mead encroach upon the lower portion of Grand Canyon, items that relate to public health and safety in the Lake Mead region are consolidated with PART 15 (HEALTH AND SAFETY IN THE GRAND CANYON–LAKE MEAD REGION) of the bibliography. However, items that pertain to pollution and investigations of pollutants in Lake Mead, and their attendant concerns, are retained here in Part 11, Section 1.

Citations regarding environmental issues of the Yuma Desalting Plant are found in this section. However, see in Part 12, Section 1 of the bibliography for items that relate to the plant's impact on water-supply.

To help distinguish items that are solely about Mexico, Item numbers in colored italics within Section 1 (for example, 11.5889) denote these geographically restricted items.[51] Item numbers that are not italicized in this Section pertain to the lower Colorado River region of the U.S. or the U.S. and Mexico together.

This section of the bibliography contains a great deal of taxonomic nomenclature of biological organisms; the so-called binomial and trinomial nomenclature of genera and species (Genus species; Genus species subspecies; Genus species var. variety, in italics) and capitalized proper names of higher taxonomic groups (like phyla, classes, and families, not italicized). Although a citation will be exactly as printed, in notes that may follow it I have taken the opportunity to clarify some of the nomenclatural conventions that may not be intuitive to those who do not practice in these fields. I have indicated as best as I have been able the newly introduced taxa in a publication that come from localities within the geographic embrace of this bibliography. To disambiguate variant usages, in the notes that I append to some citations I use spelled-out phrases to bring attention to these new taxa. For example, "new species" is used instead of the nomenclaturally more conventional "n. sp.", "nov. sp.", "sp. n." or "sp. nov." (which in any case are synonymous terms); likewise for "new genus", "new subgenus", "new subspecies", "new variety", "new combination", "new status", "new name", or any similar usage with a taxonomic name. In this fashion, too, one may find in this bibliography all such cited occurrences simply by searching for the spelled-out "new species" (etc.). The conventional forms do also appear when they are a part of a title or a quotation.

Ornithological style conventions call for the accepted common names of birds to be capitalized; for example, the Southwestern Willow Flycatcher and the Yuma Clapper Rail. Such usage is meant to convey the idea that the bird in question is one with a single, established taxonomic (scientific) name. This convention is not followed in this bibliography, in so far as no other animal or plant species are capitalized by practitioners in those fields, and to accordingly single out birds is awkward. Only in the case of direct quotations (within quotation marks) are bird common names shown herein with capital letters.

In quoted texts, ♂ and ♀ indicate specimens that are male and female, respectively.

The cottonwood of the United States (Populus deltoides) yields an abundance of long, soft, fibrous bark, used by the Indians for ropes, twines, sandals, mats, etc. ‘Whoever has seen the petticoats made of the inner bark of the cottonwood (P. fremonti), worn by the squaws along the Colorado River, must have realized the possibility of utilizing the same material as well as that of the allied species.’ (Dr. V. Havard.)” And see “Fig. 39. Willow wool (Salix pentandra) [. . .] The willow trees along the Colorado River, Arizona, yield [an] abundance of long, soft bast, from which the Indians make ropes and twine for domestic purposes, as well as sandals and mats. The females generally dress scantily, only that part of the body from the waist to the knees is hidden from view. This custom is observed by most of the Indian females living along the Colorado River. They strip off the back from these trees and bury it in blue mud for a few days, after which it is taken out, washed clean, and dried. It is now soft, pliable, and easily handled. Being cut into requisite lengths, they are fastened very thickly to a belt of the wearer. ([Charles Richards] Dodge.)” (ENTIRE NOTES)]

[This is a profusely documented and illustrated publication, chiefly comprising the descriptions of new species (date of publication 30 October 2020). With respect to this bibliography, nearly all of the pertinent taxa are from the Grand Canyon region, for which see the citation of Baral et al. (2020, ITEM NO. 19.6519). This citation lists those taxa that are typified or for which descriptions are based on collections in the lower Colorado River region (as defined by this bibliography); numerous other localities are omitted in this summary citation. Only page numbers are given; pertinent enumerated plates of illustrations are embedded on those same pages. Locality data are given here only in condensed format, documenting just the geographic locale, although each published description includes collection information such as altitude, host material, collector, date of collection, and repository and catalog number of the material. One description cited here notes material that is "not included"; these specimens "deviate from the established taxa only in some minor points . . . [though] mentioned under that taxon which appears to be most closely related, but they are not included in a description, nor are they proposed as a separate new species." (p. 17) The "not-included" materials, although taxonomically not precisely identified, are mentioned here because they document collections from the region that this bibliography covers. (Future researchers, of course, may indeed consider some such material to belong to the species under which Baral et al. have listed it.) Lists of included and not-included materials in the publication are often lengthy, with material sometimes from nation- and worldwide localities. Also note that the new taxa are credited to specific authors, not to the authors of the volume as a whole, but only the credited authors are listed in this citation even though the precise format is lengthier; for example, the first-listed species that follows is taxonomically more precise as "Orbilia sonorensis Baral & G. Marson in Baral, Weber, and G. Marson". • Taxa noted from the lower Colorado River region: [1] Orbilia sonorensis Baral & G. Marson, new species (pp. 1145-1148); included material from "Nevada, Mojave Desert . . . 30 km SE of Las Vegas, 7 km W of Boulder, Railroad Pass". [2] Orbilia vermiculati Baral & G. Marson, new species (pp. 1166-1168); not-included material from "Arizona, Mojave Desert, 15 km SE of Havasu Lake City [sic, Lake Havasu City], N of Aubrey Hills".]

2018	11.17930	[Photo.] In november 2017, the Sierra Club Desert Committee held its fall meeting on the shore of the Salton Sea. In recent years the lessening of water input has caused the lake level to fall, making the exposed lakebed a source of toxic dust. An increase in water salinity will soon kill off the fish life turning the lake into a dead sea. here Imperial Irrigation District officials explain their mitigation plans for the region. The Survivor (Desert Survivors, Oakland, California), 37(1) (Spring): 3.
